

Market Statistics: January-November 2022

Home Sales:

Interest rates continue to influence the housing market in November. Whether in an urban or rural area, home sales have slowed beyond the typical seasonal dip. The chart to the right shows a more traditional seasonal shift.

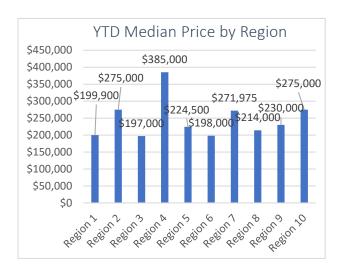

Home Prices:

Median sales price remains strong despite the drop in sales. This is likely due to the limited number of available listings.

Inventory:

Month's Supply, or the number of months it would take to sell off existing inventory based off the sales of the past 30 days, remains remarkably low. A "buyer's market" is thought to be over 6 months of inventory, with balance between 3 and 6. Sellers wanting to list now, at the right price points, still have an opportunity to reach motivated buyers.

Interest Rates: December 1, 2022, 6.49% for a 30-year fixed

Over the past several months we have seen a steady decline in interest rates from their high of 7.08%. Although housing affordability remains a key concern, these recent declines have helped to stabilize purchase demand for housing.
